DISC GOLF FEATURE (PRO TIP)

DISC GOLF ETIQUETTE

The rules for recreational disc golf are easy to understand. Put the disc into the target in the fewest throws possible. Repeat for each hole. The player with the lowest score wins. This makes the game easy to learn and fun. But, there's an extra set of rules that make the game enjoyable and safer for everyone... disc golf etiquette. Below is our top 10 list of disc golf etiquette rules to follow.

1. Speed of play

Be aware of groups around you. Are you playing slow? Kindly invite faster groups to play through. Catch up to a larger group? Respectfully ask to play through.

2. Honors, farthest away throws first

Lowest score from the previous hole throws first on the next hole. As you play the hole, the person farthest away from the target throws first.

3. Is everyone (far) out of your range?

Make sure everyone is well out of range before you throw. If there's even a chance you can reach someone ahead of you, DON'T THROW. If you accidentally throw toward another group, yell loud and clearly... FORE!

4. Don't be a distraction

When others are throwing, get out of their line of sight, don't move and be quiet.

5. Help your cardmates

Watch your cardmates' throws. Help search for lost discs. There are no referees, most decisions are made by a majority vote of your group.

6. Obey park rules

Be aware of park rules. If it's a public park, disc golf shares the park with everyone. Be courteous to all park guests.
